About Your Certificate

SITHFAB009A vs SITHFAB201

On the 1st of July 2013 the SITHFAB201 qualification superseded (replaced) the SITHFAB009A qualification. This coincided with a change in how the RSA qualification is governed. It is now managed at a Federal Government level, rather than at a State Government level. This means that the SITHFAB201 qualification is nationally recognised (although some states may have additional requirements). SITHFAB201 does not expire and you will not be required to renew it.

Where is my OLGR certificate or Card?

Since the 1st of July 2013 this qualification is being governed at a federal level. This means that state-level certificates (e.g. those pictured below) are no longer valid, or being supplied. The only certificate that is required for most states is the attached nationally recognised statement of attainment. If your employer requires further clarification they should contact their state governing body.
